BRAUN, Dr.(phil) Winifried. (DOB: 09.01.10). (n.d.) Fl.St.Ing. [from ADI(K) summaries (28.06.45) associated with the DVL: Since 1937 this man had worked in the Prüfstelle for the Luftfahrtzeuge in Berlin-Adlershof. Latterly as head of the Aerodynamics and Flugmechanik Gruppe of the Flugsicherung department. His chief work was the testing of aircraft parts under water instead of by the normal wind tunnel method. This activity was carried out in the high speed test tank of the Hamburger Schiffsbau Versuchanstalt in Hamburg. A submarine cine-camera was installed in order to observe the cause of any breaks etc. In the development stage only was a test in which, instead of towing the aircraft part through the water, the water was allowed to flow past the complete aircraft itself. The aircraft was to be suspended by floats, submerged and set in motion by catapult apparatus. Braun was also associated with Nagler on his project for a 40 kg helicopter carried in the form of a pack which was mentioned in the parag. 14-15 of AP/WIU No.86/45.]

EGERSDÖRFER, Ing. Fritz. [from ADI(K) summaries (10.45): The proprieter of an engineering bureau in Friedenau. He claims never to have worked for any Ministry but to have had all his patents either confiscated or commandeered by the RLM. Details of his most important patents are as follows: (a) Double gear fuel pump (Doppelzahnrad Förderpumpe), this pump was used on all BMW engines of recent design (all BMW 805s). 300,000 had been built under licence by Ehrich u. Gratz, Ilsenstrasse 97 , Berlin; (b) Double gear fuel injection pumpe (Doppelzahnrad Einspritzpumpe). This pump was to be used both on regular aero-engines and also on jet units. It was completed but not yet in production. The RLM had taken the patents; (c) Pneumatic starter for aircraft engines (Druckluftstarter). 175 of these had been built under licence by Sumvergasser K.G., Michael Kirchstrasse, Berlin; (d) High pressure pumps for jet units, These were of two types: double and single geared. They were to be built by Gebrüder Köppe A.G. Schonaus Allee 132, Berlin; (e) Adjustable automatic [pump for hydraulic landing gear. This pump had been completed but was not in production although the RLM had the patents; (f) A patented idea for gradual increase in the aceleration of rocket projectiles based on the incorporation of chamber containing water, which, on being heated, forced fuel into the combustion chamber at a gradually increasing rate. The RLM had taken the patent; (g) Another patented idea for firing shells by starting combustion in the front of the powder chamber rather than in the rear, thus preventing the expulsion of unburned powder. It was stated that Egersdorfer gear pumps had many applications other than aero engines. One, designed for the naptha industry, was designed for the pumping of viscous fluids. A pile of papers and plans concerning most of the above mentioned patents has been passed to ADI(K).]

EVERLING, Dr. (habil.)Emil. [from ADI(K) summaries (10.45): - From 1914 - 1932 held the post of Chief Scientist at the recently opened D.V.L. at Berlin-Adlershof. He subsequently became Professor at the Berlin Technische Hochschule and there produced the well known "Everling Quantities". In 1940 he was appointed head of the newly formed Institut für Luftfahrtmesstechnik. Everling had certain original ideas on making aircraft instruments function according to the laws of nature, so that the pilots reaction to reading the dials is quicker and more automatic. Thus, he claims, that the climb indicator, which ascends when the aircraft is losing height, is a better instrument than the normal altimeter, the needle of whch, after the aircraft has passed a certain height, descends on the opposite side of the dial. Another of Everling's ideas is to achieve a truly "blind" sytem of flying in this the artifical horizon works through the pilot's seat, pressure plates rising on one side or the other according to which wing drops. Other parts of the body are used for acceleration, climb. turn, etc. All these experiments Everling claims to have carried out in a Link-trainer at the Institut für Luftfahrtmesstechnik and the pilots responses were said to have been quicker, more accurate and more automatic.]
